SAVINGS OF AN OLD MAN

"I know a merchant who so much overdoes politeness that I dread to go into his store. He does not overdo honesty; when he advertises ten pounds of sugar for sixty-five cents, he does not give eleven pounds, to be extra honest. That would be dangerous; it would break him up. I wonder he cannot appreciate that his overdoing politeness may break him up. I think I shall quit him, and fear others grumbling."

—E. W. Howe.

Linn Cole came near losing a valuable young heifer, October 30th, when his cows came to the barn that night, the heifer was bloated in dreadful shape so Linn sent for Linn Farrar in haste and Linn quickly responded and they found that she had a large apple lodged in her windpipe; well, Linn is one of these fellows that does not have to look in the little book entitled, "What to do and when to do it," so they got busy and got the apple through and saved the heifer which they said could not live but a few minutes more. Mr. Cole said Linn's services were simply marvellous.

Local hunters go cooning, Homer and Charlie Farrar and Jerry Bartlett procured the services of John Libby's coon dog one evening just after evening just a little while ago, started out at nine P. M. for a destination any old place. They hunted hard through swamps and sides of mountains with their companion, the dog, close at heel, till the young hours of the next morning found them upon the east side of what is known as the Pine-nuckle, a very high point of land near Namond Burgess's place. Tired and hungry, they proposed to sit down upon a fallen tree and eat their lunch. Soon after they filled their pipes and lit them and soon they were discharging as much smoke as the dove line freight and the boys were leaving the comforts of the house, talking over the past, present, and future, perhaps emphasizing the latter, all of a sudden their interesting conversation changed to one of a more serious nature, was attracted by the grand voice of a monster bear which seemed to be at first nearly a mile away and off they went, the boys were next, and of course, was quiet a part of the time, but at short intervals his voice would ring out through the tall timber all the time and the boys were going on and on, the course leader, too. Well, after one-half hour had passed, Jerry said his old pipe had gone out and sure enough, every pipe in the party was as cold as a piece of ice, while Charlie said he had got a hard day's work for the following day and he thought the crowd had better go home, the other boys scoffing the notion. They took the dog from his slumbers and the bunch hit a lively pace for home, unharmed, though the weather condition, not being favorable, the boys have not been coon hunting since.

An event of great importance to the people of this vicinity occurred at the home of Rev. Ashley A. Smith, pastor of the Universalist Church, at Bangor, Monday evening, October 24, when Warren and Mavis Partridge of Stockton Springs were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The double ring service was used. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. B. H. Nichols, of Hope, and an aunt, Mrs. L. E. Gray, of Sonoma, California. After an automobile tour through New England, they arrived home at Mr. Aqua Cottage, Friday evening.

Later in the evening they were given an old time serenade by about twenty-five of the most enthusiastic neighbors.

A fine treat was served. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Partridge of Stockton Springs, a graduate of Stockton Springs High School and Farmington Normal School, a member of the Eastern Star, Rebekah, and Gange.

She taught the East Fryeburg School for the past two years. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Warren and always lived here. Waterford

Susan Hamlin Wilkins

The death of Susan Hamlin Wilkins, at Waterford, October 13, 1927, in her eighty-seventh year, was an event of more than ordinary significance.

During her long life, and wherever she was, she exerted a very real influence for good.

In her youth and early womanhood she achieved distinction as a teacher and had a long and notable career in Brookline.

The affection and respect of her pupils was deeply evidenced when some of her boys, who had become famous and prosperous, sent her a beautiful yacht suitably inscribed. Some of these boys and girls she brought to Waterford for their vacations and to this day that village sees returning each summer those introduced by her to its charms.

Waterford was her home and the home of her forebears and she loved it passionately. She took a keen interest in its affairs and in all its people. Her home was a center of hospitality. So long as they were able, they gave generous support to the activities of the Church, the Circle, the Library and the community.

Miss Wilkins' ancestors were among the founders of Waterford. Her great grandfather, Captain Eleazer Hamlin, was of Harvard, Massachusetts, and an officer in the Revolutionary War. Her grandfather, Africa Hamlin, served in the War under his father. At the close of that War, the young soldiers, discouraged by depressed currency and impoverished and neglected farms, left the old Commonwealth and turned eastward to the virgin lands of Maine.

Captain Eleazer Hamlin secured a grant of lands in Waterford and vicinity and at least four of his sixteen children settled in Maine. Cyrus settled in Paris and was the father of Vice President Hannibal Hamlin. Hannibal settled in Waterford and was the father of Rev. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, the famous missionary and college president. Africa also settled in Waterford, where he was the first Town Clerk and held other town offices; he was the grandfather of Susan Hamlin Wilkins. His wife, Susanna Stone, is said to have been drawn on a moose sled from the end of Long Pond to their wilderness home.

At this time there was a great emigration from Harvard to Waterford. In 1785 and 1786 Thaddeus Brown, Samuel Warren, John and Joel Atherton followed the Hamlins to Waterford for the most part making the journey on foot, and shortly thereafter there came to Waterford from Harvard, Richard Bryant, Peter Gerry, Benjamin, Isreal and Oliver Hale, Jonathan Houghton, Marthoro Kingdon, William Munroe, Abraham Whitcomb and William Willard. The descendants of these immigrants may still be found in the town.

Miss Wilkins, paternal grandfather, John Wilkins, also came early to Waterford from Massachusetts and married Africa Hamlin's daughter, Lydia. Her father, John, 2nd, lived for a short time in Harrison and St. Johnsbury, Vermont, but most of his life was spent in Waterford, where he was at one time interested in a tannery, when each community undertook to supply its own needs for leather.

So Miss Wilkins inherited and personified these best New England traits. She had courage, convictions, purpose, devotion, industry and loyalty. She loved education, industry and loyalty. She loved education, industry and loyalty. She loved education, industry and loyalty.

She formed of the best current literature. She believed in the individualism of the Puritans and ever sought to make herself a potent force in whatever she undertook.

We shall no longer meet her driving about the hills she loved so much, with her devoted companion and friend, Miss Baird, or feel the consolation of her enthusiasm for Waterford. Her death leaves us all poorer.

How many of the rooms in your house will be livable this winter?

NOW is the time to remember those icy, shut-off rooms, those "overcoat breakfasts" of last winter, and then decide to let us tell you about the Estate Heatrola.

Because the Heatrola operates with a double air-circulating system, it will flood every room in your house with healthfully moistened heat. Even the chilliest bedrooms will be as cheerfully warm as the room in which the Heatrola stands.

And the Heatrola is more than a heating plant—finished in mahogany-colored, vitreous enamel, it is a beautiful piece of furniture which will harmonize with your prettiest things.

Come in today, or invite us to call. Learn all about the Heatrola before cold weather gets a chance to tighten its grip on your home.
